

Project Update: November 2014

I would like to update that I was invited for attending IUCN World Park Congress 2014 held at Sydney Australia.

I got sponsorship as I would Bushing Boundaries Challenge. I met young professionals like me all over the world and attended pre-congress workshop. It helps me to share how I grow up with enthusiasm in nature conservation, and as a founder of OMCAR Foundation and its ongoing project.

Figure 1 - Delivering speech at plenary session in IUCN World Park Congress 2014

I got two presentations in two sessions. At the end of my presentation, I mentioned all the supporters including Rufford Small Grants Programme.

I was also had a short interview with National Geographic during the congress.

As a follow up, Young Professionals in Nature Conservation Group is formed and a pact developed.

We visited Google office in Sydney for a one day workshop of using google tools for conservation mapping.

Our representative delivered a speech on behalf of us, at the closing ceremony of the Congress. Approximately 6000 people have participated in this congress.

I feel empowered after meeting such amazing conservationist including Sylvia Earle.

Figure 3 - Young professionals at the top of Google office in Sydney

Figure 2 - Young professionals working for nature conservation during the IUCN pre-congress workshop held at Blue Mountains, Australia